"Listen, 'Jingle Bells' is in the public domain, so there's no one to sue. I'm sorry your feelings are hurt, but my advice is ignore it, wash the suit regularly, and eventually it'll just go away."

Illinois Bible Colleges Head to The Court of Appeals

By attorney Sorin Leahu

On December 8, three Illinois Bible colleges will appear before the 7th Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago to argue their right to operate and grant religious degrees without government interference into the content of their religious teaching or their religious faculty members.

King's Tabernacle is Now Free to Worship

After a drawn out building permissions dispute laced with racism, King's Tabernacle is finally able to open its doors to the community. "Whether it be helping to integrate minorities into the town, whether it be helping the Police Department have better racial relations with people of color — whatever we can do to help this town continue to move forward and be a great town, we're willing to do." - Reverend Chris Abhulime

Raising Up More Lawyers for Jesus

"We look at things through the lens of traditional Christian teachings and biblical principles. So in the course of the discussion of the law we will not just look at what the law is but critique it in terms of what it was designed to be by the Creator.

-Regent University School of Law Dean Michael Hernandez
